Artist Spotlight

JOLYNN FORMAN

I have always enjoyed creating whether it was a tower made out of junk as a child to the best treehouse on the block as an adult. Art gives me that chance to create something meaningful; something that can touch another person's soul. I especially enjoy combining up two wonderful styles of art, abstract and realism, into a new way that uses the best of both. Abstract's emotional freedom combined with realism's narrative aspects together form a new way to look at things and find new beauty in something that has been depicted again and again in the traditional ways. I mainly paint portraiture and religious pieces but have recently started dabbling in glass mosaic animals.

I currently teach high school art at Timpanogos High and love working with the teenagers! Art matters in schools and we need more of it to decrease anxiety, build critical thinking and self confidence. I live in Provo, Utah with 4 children, a husband, and a bunch of animals.
